CRD Quesnel Library tentatively scheduled to re-open Feb. 19, 2014 Book collection not affected by flooding

Quesnel, B.C. – The Cariboo Regional District Quesnel Branch Library is tentatively scheduled to re-open on Wednesday, Feb. 19. The Library sustained some damage as a result of a flood that occurred on Monday, Feb. 10 and has remained closed since then.

The administration areas and the public washrooms received the most damage as a result of the flooding. Patrons should note that a portion of the public area of the library will be closed and used for a staff work area until repairs to offices are completed. The total value of the damage to the facility is yet to be determined.

A small portion of carpeting in the public area, immediately adjacent to the administration area suffered damage from water seeping through the wall between the staff and public area. The CRD Library book collection and other borrowing materials were not damaged by the flooding. Industrial fans are in place throughout the affected area.

The Cariboo Regional District Board of Directors and staff thank the public for their patience while we prepare to re-open.
